

SCOTTISH SONGSTRESS WILL SING TONIGHT

Miss Jessie N. MacLachlan, the Scottish prima donna, arrived by the "Alameda" yesterday, and sings in the Opera House tonight.

The San Francisco "Chronicle" of March 25 describing Miss MacLachlan's appearance in that city, says: "Miss Jessie N. MacLachlan, the Scottish prima donna, stirred all the hearts of her country-people gathered last evening in Lyric Hall for the entertainment conducted under the auspices of Clan Fraser, Order of the Scottish Clans. Proving that there are Scotch songs to make one laugh, dance and cry, Miss MacLachlan gave the greatest variety of old charming ballads. Her voice is a mezzo-soprano of good range and she handles it with grace. There was an ovation for her after her singing of 'Blue Bonnets'."

The other artists appearing at the Opera House tonight are John McInnes, solo 'celloist, J. Fulton Dick, humorist and elocutionist, and Robert Buchanan, pianist and conductor. The concert will commence promptly at 8:15 and the audience is requested to be in the seats by that time. The house is almost sold out and is likely to be filled to its capacity.
